

PRINCIPLES OF PUBLICATION

1. The copyrights of articles are transferred by signing the form presented on the website of the journal. The articles of authors, who have not signed and sent the Form for Transfer of Copyrights, will not be taken into consideration.
2. Each article is sent to at least two arbitrators, who are experts in the subject of article. After authors revise their articles based on the suggestions of arbitrators, the ones that are deemed appropriate to be published on the journal are determined and authors are notified. The final version of articles are organized and sent by authors to the secretary of publication via Online Article Management System (OMYS). The errors that may be found in the article following its publication are the responsibility of the author.
3. Neither arbitrators are notified of the names of the authors, nor authors are notified of the names of arbitrators. The unpublished articles are sent back to authors with arbitration reports, upon author's request.
4. The Publication Committee may decide that the article be published in another section of the journal, based on the suggestions of arbitrators and may present their decision for the approval of author(s). If also deemed appropriate by author(s), the article is published on the presumed section.
5. The articles sent to the Journal must comply with the 'Principles of Writing'. The articles not complying with these principles will be returned to the author(s) for revision, without being evaluated.
6. A copy of the issue of the journal is sent to the authors of articles published in that issue and the arbitrators who evaluated those articles.
7. The membership to the Article Assessment Committee of the arbitrator, who have not evaluated the article within the due time and thereby caused delay in the publication of the journal, is reviewed.
8. The Publication Committee may appoint new members to the Article Assessment Committee, if/when they deem necessary.
9. The views stated in the research and literature review articles are the responsibility of the author, whereas; the consequences which may result from its translation are the responsibility of the translator.
10. The articles must be not published on any other periodical publications. It should be clearly stated if the articles were presented or are planned to be presented as a paper in any meeting.
11. The author(s), who do not agree with the report of the arbitrators, may withdraw his/her article. However, the author(s) must present the reason behind his/her withdrawal to the publication committee in a written manner.
12. It is allowed to cite the articles published in the journal as long as the source is stated.
13. A royalty (a fee for copyrights) is not paid for articles.
14. Articles must be written according to the ethics of scientific research and publication. Conducts against the ethical rules (fabrication, falsification, plagiarism, republication, salami slicing, excluding the supporting bodies of the work, undeserved authorship, excluding some/all references, etc.) must be avoided.

Please send your articles via the system at omys.mmo.org.tr/muhendismakina, in order to minimize the costs and time loss, which may result from the process of sending articles and evaluation by arbitrators.
